

Proclamation

President Ronald Wilson Reagan was an outstanding public servant who made a significant impact in the lives of people throughout the country and around the world.

Before serving in the Oval Office, President Reagan worked as a sportscaster, an actor, a corporate spokesman, a union leader, and served as the Governor of California. He drew on his deep-rooted values and his belief in the greatness of our nation to empower and lead Americans as the 40th President.

President Reagan left a tremendous legacy. He played a major role in establishing peaceful relations with the Soviet Union and bringing an end to the Cold War, which eventually resulted in the tearing down of the Berlin Wall. Because of his actions, millions of people today enjoy freedom and basic human rights.

On the domestic front, President Reagan helped revive the economy through his “Reaganomics” program, and restored patriotism and national pride to the American people. As one of our most popular presidents, President Reagan’s tenure is today remembered fondly by over two-thirds of Americans.

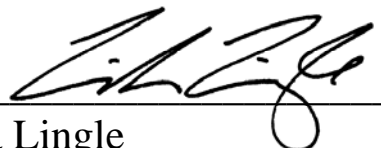

February 6, 2007, marks the 96th anniversary of Ronald Reagan’s birthday, the third since his passing.
